Two days of intense action will match up the National junior teams of Colombia, Denmark, Norway, Germany, Sweden and the Czech Republic.

Under the auspices of the Swedish Sport Diving Federation (SSDF), the competition offers some of the world's top young talent an opportunity to test themselves in international competition.

“These guys represent the future of some of the stronger national teams so fans, coaches and players around the world will be following the results closely to find out how different countries are investing in the future,” says Johan Jonsson

President of the Swedish Underwater Rugby Committee.

The Swedish men and women's national teams recently took home Silver and Bronze respectively at the World Championships held this summer.

national program believes that hosting the event should focus Sweden on task of maintaining Sweden's traditionally high level of play. In a challenge to Nordic domination of the sport, Germany and Colombia are on the rise, according to many observers.

The local ICA Kvantum grocery in Oxelösund is a partial sponsor of the Colombian National Team, which arrived on Thursday.

"They seem fit for fight," says Markus Bjurén, of Bromma Caviar Underwater Rugby Club, the local organization is responsible for the competition.
